

Photo: Isidore Montag / Gorunway.com / LOEWE

Photo: Daniele Oberrauch / Gorunway.com / Hermès

Photo: photo: Filippo Fior / Gorunway.com / Kenzo

Menswear Trend Report- Fall/Winter 2023

By: Abisai Garcia

As the fashion months come to a close for the big shows of the Fall/Winter 2023 season, Jose Criales-Unzueta does his best to compile a “Runway Report.” The Runway Report is meant to bring together all the main trends on the runway and put them into an easy-to-digest summary.

Here are the three most influential trends and how they can be expanded for the Fall/Winter seasons so you can stay the “best dressed” in your friend group.

1. Leathers

Photo: Alessandro Lucioni / Gorunway.com / Ferragamo

All the big names are fully embracing leather. While many people think that the incorporation of leather in an outfit stops at leather jackets, this season's designers are really pushing the envelope of what we can make with leather. From the classic leather jacket by Tom Ford, the relaxed fit pants by Hermès, or even the full leather suit by VTMNTS, there's no debating how much we'll see leather pieces this season.

2. Oversizing-Oversized

Photo: Filippo Fior / Gorunway.com / Louis Vuitton

Oversizing was something we thought we had under our belts already, but this season's designers are here to show us that we will be oversizing the already oversized. Whether you're looking at the puffer that almost looks inflated from Louis Vuitton, or you're looking at the trench coats made to scrape the floor by Balenciaga, your mind is most likely asking “How big can it get?” Our designers are here to answer with “really big”.

3. Reimagining The 'Going-Out-Fit'

Photo: Laura S. Fuchs / Courtesy of Willy Chavarria

When you think of a classic “Going-Out-Fit”, you probably think of the basic well-fitting jeans with a fitted t-shirt or button-up. If you’re doing a little more of a classy look: the fitted chinos/slacks and a nice button-up. This coming season, however, we’re turning that classic completely on its head.

The re-imagination of the men’s “Going-Out-Fit” is one that definitely has a lot more layers to it than some of the other trends we’re seeing. Looking at the tops being embraced by menswear creators alone, there is clearly more opening up with the ideas of “gender-neutral fashion.” Especially when you look at designers like Willy Chavarria who’s playing with full mesh, Rick Owens opting for showing skin, or even Saint Laurent experimenting with floor length/midi dresses, it shows that menswear is in for a true revolution