Fried to Perfection Amongst the Fog

From the dense fog of the Pacific Ocean comes a light at the end of a narrow street, and the smell of fried fish fills the air. As if taken from an old London street scene, the atmosphere of Camelot Fish & Chips resembles an English pub serving customers since 1969. For over 55 years, this tiny hole-in-the-wall eatery in Pacifica, CA, has treated fans to authentic English fish and chips, even wrapped in simulated newspaper, just like the old times.

The thick fillets are top quality and fresh, possibly even caught that same morning. Their trademark batter is made from scratch daily, while the chips are prepared the traditional English way. Diners can try the fish, shrimp, oysters, crab cakes, or clams, all fried to perfection. Nothing on the menu will disappoint, but for those who cannot decide, Camelot Fish & Chips offers “The Combination,” which includes one piece of fish and a choice of another fried delicacy.

Camelot Fish and Chips is located at 70 West Manor Drive in Pacifica, CA. Just follow the fog, and the scent of the fried fish will lead you straight to its doors.
