Premier League Week 5 Matchup Preview

This week's Premier League matchups come after a week's break due to international games. Liverpool kicks off the week by traveling just down the road to play Wolves. This fixture has been very one-sided in recent years, with Liverpool winning five of the last six games against a Wolves side that currently sits in the bottom half of the table. The next fixture on the docket is Aston Villa vs. Crystal Palace. Both sides will look to improve on a solid start to the season as they both sit in the top half of the table, with both sides having two wins out of four. Fulham vs. Luton Town is next, with Luton looking to redeem themselves after a 2-1 loss to Chelsea and Fulham looking to take advantage of a struggling Luton side that currently sits in second to last place. Moving to one of the bigger fixtures of the weekend, Manchester United vs. Brighton, Brighton has had a promising start to the season and are currently sitting sixth, winning three of their last four matches against a Manchester United side that is currently not living up to early expectations. They currently sit 11th, coming off a 3-1 loss to Arsenal. Next up is Tottenham vs. Sheffield United, as Tottenham look to continue their red-hot form. They are currently undefeated and sitting in second place.. This past week, Tottenham's James Maddison was named player of the month for August. Sheffield United is still looking for their first win of the season, as they currently sit just outside of the relegation zone in 17th. Manchester City vs. West Ham is the game of the weekend, with both sides sitting inside the top 4. Erling Haaland and Evan Ferguson will be the players to watch, as both scored three goals in their last game. Newcastle play host to Brentford as Newcastle looks to continue last season's success after finishing in the top four for only the third time in club history. Brentford looks to secure their second win of the season after tying three of their last four games. Sunday, Bournemouth plays Chelsea as both sides look for a positive result after lackluster starts to the season. with both sides sitting on the bottom half of the table. Arsenal travel to Goodison Park to play Everton. Arsenal come off a 3-1 victory over Manchester United. Everton, will hope for any type of point as they currently sit inside the relegation zone at 18th. The final game of the weekend is Forest vs. Burnley, as Forest will look to continue their positive start to the season against a Burnley side that sits dead last in the Premier League.
