Week three of the NFL season is over and let's take a look at how the local team, The San Francisco 49ers, did. The 49ers hosted the New York Giants for their first home game of the season. Both teams were coming off week two wins and were missing key players. The New York Giants were without star running back Saquon Barkley and the 49ers were missing wide receiver Brandon Aiyuk. Both may have had a shot to play week three if it wasn't for the game being on Thursday night. So this meant limited rest for both teams as they battled their respective injuries. The game started off slow with a field goal from each team. Jake Moody connected on a 28 yard field goal, while Graham Gano hit from 44 yards out leaving the score tied 3-3 heading into the second quarter. The 49ers began to dial up plays as they scored two touchdowns in the second quarter. The first was a nine yard touchdown pass to rookie wide receiver Ronnie Bell followed by a four yard touchdown run by Christian McCaffrey. The Giants were able to net another field goal before halftime which brought the score to a 17-6, 49ers lead. The Giants opened up the second half with a scoring drive. Former 49er, Matt Breida, rushed for an eight yard touchdown run but the Giants failed to convert the two point conversion making the score 17-12. Jake Moody connected on two more field goals, from 21 yards and 36 yards. Brock Purdy followed with a 27 yard touchdown pass to Deebo Samuel to seal the victory. The final score was 30-12, moving the 49ers to 3-0. Next up are the Arizona Cardinals at Levi's Stadium on October 1st.
