I bought an iced vanilla latte and it was well made. The perfect amount of sweetness and not too overpowering. I also got a croissant and it was really good as well. The only negative part about it is that it's in San Francisco so it's not that close to campus but still definitely worth the drive.

I bought an iced vanilla honey latte at a small pop up coffee stand right outside Dolores Deluxe in San Francisco and it was delicious. They put the perfect amount of honey and vanilla that made the coffee taste smooth. I definitely would recommend going and trying their variety of different coffees.

Personally, I definitely wouldn't come back here, but if you're a matcha person or don't get lattes then maybe this place is for you. I came thinking there would be an iced vanilla latte like every regular coffee shop but they didn't make vanilla lattes. Therefore I had to get Pea Butter Cream Latte and for the price it was not worth it at all.
