

Cats Sometimes Hate People And Here Is Why

Written by: Joana Marie Palpallatoc
Dated: September 23, 2026

This is Shakira, a.k.a. Shaki. She is a very affectionate cat, but only with people she is comfortable with. She likes to cuddle with only one person, her dad. She sometimes doesn't like seeing new people, and when she does, she runs away.

Most cats feel this way because of a traumatic experience they have had in the past that made them not like people, especially if that experience almost killed them or hurt them. It is said that cats are so smart that they know when a person is kind or not. This is what they go off of when they sit or lay on someone. If they sense you aren't kind, they will run away.